Earlier, at Austin, Truman described the congresman as one of the Texas statesmen "who have worked with me, since I became President, for prosperity in the U. S. and for peace in the world."

Johnson, certified Democratic nominee for senator, defeated Former Gov. Coke Stevenson by 87 votes in the August runoff. Stevenson is contesting the election.

The governor's youngest child was on hand, along with prosperity in the United States and members of the domestic staff from the governor's mansion. He climbed to the platform of the train, sleepy-eyed, and was introduced to Mr. Truman by Gov. Jester.

Chief of Police R. D. Thorp estimated the crowd here at between four and five thousand persons.
